While the Make Up For Ever's arsenal of powders, foundations and lipsticks are doubling up to accessories, all these products are designed more practical multi-taskers.

That's because the Make Up For Ever's arsenal of products (the brand started out as a Parisian brand in the 1960s) are used to being tested with designing professional formulas for stage and studio with Doni Corrao, Linda J. in their latest advertisement, and we're not too sure if they're from the original.

A new thing to note: Make Up For Ever doesn't do any shade-matching. It's all about the skin. Make Up For Ever doesn't do any shade-matching. It's all about the skin. Make Up For Ever doesn't do any shade-matching. It's all about the skin.
