HERO HOTLINE

Creative Director of Billionaire Boys Club EU, Ross Westland's fantasy has turned to reality

His dream of us get to live out our teenage dreams, that of all, come true. Maybe you wanted to make it as a pop-singer, or be a backing singer for Beyoncé, or perhaps like me, simply morph into Rihanna. How is that working out for you? Yeah, I've not reached my goal either. The exception is the red. Ross Westland is now the Creative Director of Billionaire Boys Club EU, a company he's wanted to work for ever since he was a teenager.

Growing up in Wolverhampton, he was drawn to being something "semi-cool" that combined different influences and interests. "I always decided wanting to have a job mixing design, branding, and marketing since I was small, but didn't know that it was called 'creative director' until I was at uni," he grins. "From that uni, I remember telling one lecture what I wanted to do and he laughed."

"I started to work for BBC in whichever way possible since I was 15/16," Westland continues. "When I was studying in my second year at university I was using an internship opportunity with a different company just to be in London for the summer. While I was there I found an article on Craig Ford who's the founder of ANONIM and been responsible for distributing BBC in Europe from the beginning. I read that article that he had founded a new trademark in London exhibiting BBC and other ANONIM brands at the time, so I sent an email offering to help out in any way possible and Craig replied."

Starting at the company by running the BBC EU website, Westland was always striving to do more: it was he who started putting together music and games with up and coming artists, think Travis Scott, Young Lean and Joey Bada$$: "Both [fashion and music] are so intertwined nowadays they are almost the same thing, they almost rely on each other," he explains. "Look at what merchandiser can add to an artist financially and in building their own brand. In the same respect, an artist can literally build a clothing brand/make an existing brand popular. Music producers are the creative directors, designers are like garment technologists, so shows is like a collection. Most producers or artists have a tag on their records which is as iconic as seeing a logo on clothing. When the two stars align perfectly and organically it can have a huge impact on the wider culture, not just fashion."

Now thinking about putting together a BBC EU Tour with artists and pop-up stores across Europe, Westland is well on his way to establishing BBC EU as one of the most innovative and exciting brands around at the moment. Take that, university lecture.

WEIRD WESTERN TALES

Capsule collection turned full fashion label, Blood Brother was born from a bet between

The most fashion friendships are formed over football. Think Dolce and Gabbana and the "die-hard" friends Nicky Atti and James Walker — better known as the menswear label the clothing brand Blood Brother — originally met while playing football at the London College of Fashion. Their chemistry on the pitch was so successful, they decided to test it in slightly less muddy settings. "From winning the ULL League first season, we knew that working together had potential then to push on and be a successful partnership," Walker grins. "We always had the ambition of having our own brand and after sharing a flat together, the vision became a reality."

Starting Blood Brother in 2011, the pair originally began by creating a T-shirt line. "With both James and I's energy, we were bound to do something together and we felt a soft entry was perfect. T-shirts," both grin. "It's really easy to send language and we just wanted to make something off the top of our heads." Before long they had customers outside of their circle of friends. Walker explains, "Our amazing T-shirts was enough to land us our first stockists through and some great retailers." Since then, the duo have gone on to create a range of menswear, all around tracks and typographic details and the new menswear label "the parcel" of AW19, forthcoming catwalk offerings. "Neither one of us could have accomplished what we have without each other," both grin, sitting on all the Black and making us even more grateful that they chose each other. "Maybe we should be winning the football pitch more often if that's not a fair bet."

弯曲、伸展、缠绕，对于青铜和石头的重新构造和融合，是英国雕塑家Henry Moore的标志性创作风格。2017年Burberry二月系列中，Christopher Bailey将其作品作为灵感来源，运用于服装的轮廓和线条之中，塑造了细节丰富的务实形象。
