PUMPKIN BOWLING

This is a seasonal take on ten-pin bowling. In the run-up to Halloween, ask ten small drink bottles for pins. You can give them the appearance of ghosts by pouring in 5cm white glue, paint and a drop of paint thinner and shaking. Add faces to the monsters with black marker pens. You'll also need small pumpkins with short stems for bowling balls. If you can't find any, oranges work just as well.

Add some gravel or water to each bottle so they don't topple over too early. Arrange them in a triangle and mark out the boundaries of your 'alley' with rope and branches, or string if you are indoors, plus a starting line. Then, following the rules of ten-pin bowling, each player gets two goes at bowling to try to knock down as many ghost 'pins' as possible.

THE MUMMY CHASE

You'll need a garden to play this game for a quiet area and understanding neighbours, plus a couple of tea rolls.

Divide the players into teams. Each team nominates a mummy. Give each team a couple of tea rolls and you are ready for the chase to begin. As the mummy plays, team members must wrap their running legs head to toe, leaving just a small gap for the eyes and toes. Teams must set up all their tea rolls.

Once the mummification is complete, every team gets a start. Set up a starting and finishing line for a race between the mummies, who must complete it without their wrappings coming off. If the paper starts to unravel mid-race, the mummies must return to the starting line, where their team-mates can perform emergency repairs. The first mummy to cross the finishing line with bandages intact is declared the winner.
